History

The 51st is a new unit. Untried in combat and following a unique structure, there are many within the WFP and the Northern Guard who feel that this will provide no end of weakness. Designed to provide rapid force deployment, the unit is designed around an armor company, a gear company and an infantry company. The overall scheme is to divide the force into two Albion class land ships providing high-speed response throughout the region and significant combat support.

The Regimental Commander, Colonel William McDermott is unique and quite extraordinary. Walking from a well placed family, he enlisting the WFPA at the tender age of 23 cycles, he served as both an infantryman and tank crewman for 5 cycles until he was accepted into the Academy. After graduation, William took command of a Gear company as a Lieutenant. His excellent command perspective and preternatural tactical ability provided quick and ready promotion. His intensity as a youth has been tempered with control and authority. His prowess in combat and politics has gained him the ability to design and field a unit of his own devise.

Jaspin Regina represents an unusual element within the regiment. A former member of the United Mercantile Federation, she fled her homeland to join the WFPA. She has a true distaste and distrust of the UMF.

Colonel McDermott has gone about a rather unique assignment of his regimental staff. They operate as attachments to his line units, each assigned to a particular command and control variant vehicle. McDermott spends particularly large amounts of time in his heavily modified Sabertooth. MAJ Jaspin shows particular affiliation to her roots and ties tightly to the armor and Alpha Company. SGM Jeenis, having served 20 plus cycles with the infantry works quite closely with Charlie Company. It is interesting to note, however, that it is not unusual to see these command elements working with a separate element. The infantrymen of Charlie are coming quickly to appreciate McDermott's presence in his Sabertooth during training operations.

Notes

Following a unique structure, the unit follows standard Northern Guard functional groups.

Command & Unit Structure

Colonel McDermott has lead the 51st since its inception. As the primary incentive behind the formation of the regiment, his reputation is at stake. Hard driving, his lack of naval consideration may cause him no end of troubles. His interaction with the commanders of the Albion class land ships may well determine his fate. As his staff is new and untested, he hopes to draw this structure into a cohesive and powerful operation.

Alpha Company

Commanded by CPT Capac Mendez, Alpha comprises the bulk fire power of the 51st. Mendez is hard charging, determined to show his family the wealth provided to him through the WFA and the Northern Guard. His forthright stance and his lead from the front attitude has done much to insure the support of his troops. SGT Baez, the senior company NCO, is a veteran of the War of the Alliance. His contributions have been great, supporting all his troops throughout his career. His lack of familial clan has hampered his career, and he is beginning to feel stagnant with his role.

Bravo Company

CPT d'Aquatin Sara is a hard driving commander. Determined to show her family the strength of arms, she approaches every situation as if she is proving herself yet again. Her concern for her family's place in the WFP has provided no end of concern to her. This haughtiness has given her troops the impression that she is above them. Her senior NCO, SGT Peters Scott, is well liked, but everyone sees him as a political climber. If he weren't as good a tactician as he is, he would have no support within the company.

Charlie Battalion

LT Lexington Liliyan may just be in over her head. Intelligent and polite, Liliyan is definitely not designed to be a commander. A bit too feminine, she lacks the command authority that would make her an excellent leader. Never having been under fire, there are many concerned that she will not be able to snap into her role. SGT Wening, on the other hand, may be a bit too hard. Driving his troops beyond their limits 110% of the time, he has earned the ire of most, if not all, of his troops.

Support Company

The unsung heroes of the regiment, it is the support company where “the buck stops.” The chief quartermaster, Captain Todd Brown, a 28 cycle combat veteran, takes his responsibilities very seriously. Supported by five sergeants in charge of each of the support sections, he rules with an iron fist. His understanding of regimental operations and connections throughout the WFPA and the Northern Guard is amazing.

Paint Schemes & Logos

The 51st have no reputation. As such, there are few original paint schemes. They utilize the standard Northern Guard-recommended camouflage for their operational zone. Their technicians use the right quarter or leg for unit for the section sigil and the left quarter or leg for the CNCS emblem. Identification numbers are painted on the top of vehicles and the upper right arm of gears.

Unique Squadrons

The 51st's unique structure and mission as well as its totally new organization have precluded the development of unique squadrons.
